

Jeffrey Glassman, J.D., LL.M., is a partner at Meadows Collier in Dallas with a practice focus that includes counseling individuals, businesses, tax-exempt organizations, and trusts and estates with respect to their most demanding tax planning and controversy issues. Jeffrey is also the Chair of the Tax Controversy Committee of the State Bar of Texas Tax Section and Vice Chair of the American Bar Association Section of Taxation's Court Procedure and Practice Committee.

He represents clients in all stages of civil and criminal tax matters, including complex IRS examinations, administrative appeals, ruling requests, payroll tax disputes, federal tax collection issues, government investigations, and litigation. Recently, he has focused significant time on tax disputes involving private aircraft, tax-exempt organizations, and employee retention credit matters (ERC), including ERC refund lawsuits against the federal government. The vast majority of his cases are resolved privately and never made public.
